Coroner's Verdict on George Allison Brown, of Baltimore.

habit by his own admission, George Allison Brown probably died from poisoning by these drugs about 7 o'clock Sunday evening at the Monticello Hotel.

There is an element of mystery about the death and a woman is connected with that mystery. This woman, whose real name is Mrs. Massie, a Virginian by birth, is in Baltimore now, having left here on the Merchants' and Miners' steamer Sunday for that city. Satursteamer Sunday for that city. Saturday afternoon at the Monticello Hotel she came very near a tragic end in the same manner in which Brown died there Sunday evening.

Brown, who is prominently connected, it is said, having been the brother of the late Dr. R. R. Brown, of that city, arrived at the Monticello Friday evening last and was assigned to a sixth story room. Saturday morning a lady appeared and registered thusly: "Mrs. Gray, Virginia." She was accompanied by a nurse. They were given a third story room.

Saturday afternoon, a few hours after her arrival, she was taken critically ill and Dr. Stanley H. Graves was summoned to attend her. The physician found Brown in her room. He was in a nervous and excited condition and inquired anxiously if the woman would live. He told Dr. Graves that she had poisoned herself. Though in a precurious condition, the woman responded to heroic treatment, and began to revive.

she had poisoned herself. Though in a precarious condition, the woman reported to heroic treatment, and began of the condition being such she did not provide the property of the condition being such she did not recognize anything.

Dr. Graves left the room to go to a telephone and Brown was left alone with the patient. When Dr. Gravene furned he found that she was in much worse condition, more poison, it is said, having been administered.

Mr. Stokes, lessee of the hotel, sent of the condition to leave his said having been administered.

DR. GRAVES' STORY.

"On Saturday last I was called to the Monticello Hotel to attend a lady. I found this lady in a critical condition, suffering from some violent poisson. A gentleman was in her room, who gave his name as George Allison Brown. He was in a very nervous, excited condition, and anxiously inquired if the patient would die. He told me she had poisoned herself with paraldenyde. This was noticeable by the smell of her breath, but further examination showed that she was poisoned with some form of opium.

"When I made this statement to Mr. Brown he told me she had had a short while before one grain of morphine and one grain of cocaine, and was anxious to know if I thought this was sufficient to cause death in a person who had been addicted to the use of these was driven we want to the service of the service of

"I did not see Brown again that afternoon until it p. m. He then told me he had been taken to the station house. Brown, during the time he was in my presence, injected himself three or four times with this solution. He told me he had to take an injection frequently, every one-half hour a day. He showed me the syringe and small bottles of the solution, which he carried for convenience, and large bottles of the solution, which he carried for convenience, and large bottles of the solution, which he carried for convenience, and large bottles of the solution, which he carried for convenience, and large bottles of the solution in his coat pockets; said he took twenty-one grains of cocaine and nine grains of morphine a day.

"This was indicated by the label on the bottles. I saw him the next morning, that is, Sunday, July the 22d. He was very nervous and excited and worst indicated over the state of affairs; said he had been taken to the station house the evening before, and could not understand why this was done; but when I explained to him the condition of this twoman and his connection with her he seemed to realize why it was.

"Here Brown was very anxious to be left alone in the room with her, saying he would bring her out. I went down to the telephone for, a short while, and those who were left in charge allowed him to go in the room with her alone. When I returned I found her in a more desperate condition than formerly. Evidently she had had more of the drug. Myself and nurse worked on her until about 8 o'clock p. m. #### REASON FOR DISCHARGE

COMMITTEE OF STREET RAILWAY EMPLOYEES CALLS ON GENE-RAL MANAGER WRIGHT.

Within the past few days the Nor within the past few days the Nor-folk Raijway and Light Company has discharged four of its employees. Yes-terday a committee of four members of the newly organized street railway men's organization called on General Manager Peter Wright and desired to be informed why the men were dis-charged.

he informed why the men were discharged.

He replied that he would not receive and recognize the delegation as representatives of the organization, but would as individual employees of the street railway company. He then explained the reasons that led to the discharge of the men.

In his conversation with the men who called on him, Mr. Wright expressed himself as being very favorably inclined toward the new organization of the employees of the street railway and as wishing to do all in his power to promote the welfare of the men. At the same time he made it clear that the company would not accept the dictation of any organization in the conduct of the affairs of the street railway.

It is understood that the discharges were for good cause, and Mr. Wright states that the fact that they were members of the railway men's organization had no weight for or against them in the matter, nor will such membership be considered for or against any employee in his relations with the company.

oeen representing themselves to be government agents for the employment of laborers and mechanics in the Norfolk navy yard. Those self-styled agents cannot be of any assistance whatever, as the government has no agents outside of the navy yard. Any person wishing papers to make application to register for employment, can obtain them free of cost by writing to "The Recorder, Board of Labor Employment, Navy Yard, Norfolk, Va."

They can then fill out the necessary requisites of character and skill at their homes, where they are known, and bring them to the navy yard personally and register, when each man takes his turn. Whenever their services are required, written notice will be sent them to come to the yard for work on a certain day, which prevents men coming from a distance on unfounded rumors that men are required at the navy yard.
